Criminal Law (Bail) Act 1969,

Being an Act to make it clear that no period during which a convicted person has been released on bail or on recognizance is taken into account in calculating any sentence of imprisonment to be served by him.

EFFECT OF RELEASE ON BAIL, ETC., ON SENTENCE.

(1) Where in a criminal proceeding an accused person is released on bail or on recognizance, whether pending the hearing and determination of an appeal or otherwise, including the case where an appellant is released under Section 223 of the District Courts Act, any period during which he was so released shall not, unless a court having jurisdiction in the matter otherwise orders, be taken into account in calculating the length of any sentence of imprisonment to be served by him.
